Comment Of The Day

OUR OWN BABY

A NOVEL suggestion comes from a New Zealand parliamentarian — that the three Pacific dominions should hold a commerce ministers conference in Hongkong to discuss establishing industries here employing refugee labour. The proposal is almost certain to get a cold shoulder, yet it has the value of reminding all three countries that up to now they have shown very little interest in the welfare of refugees.

We might expect more, related as we are by Commonwealth bonds. The factory idea, of course, is one that takes no account of unemployment in the countries which are supposed to sponsor and finance the venture. Canadians particularly have gone through an extremely difficult period of high unemployment and however genuinely concerned they may be about the destitute state of escapees from China, their own people come first.

NOR can the Colony expect with the reputation it has earned as an industrial state in recent years, that trading partners will contribute to our productive capacity when it may one day cause inconvenience to their own.

Commenting on the New Zealand proposal, Pastor Stumpf points to the Australian restrictions which he claims are keeping out Hongkong trade. As we have argued before this is not entirely true, but apart from this the Colony must try and get away from the idea of relating refugees and trade.

WE should not expect other countries to take our products because we have severe underemployment. Our products should sell on price and quality, and we cannot use the refugee problem as a begging bowl and expect our own manufacturing ability and sales drive have failed. Otherwise we would be putting our trade on a dangerously insecure basis. For countries which want to help, the Hongkong Government has made out a "shopping list" of projects which countries supporting the Refugee Year may finance. If the three Pacific dominions feel they can afford something bigger there are satellite towns, resettlement blocks, housing estates, schools, hospitals and an assortment of other proposals which have to be financed.

HONGKONG, however, should understand that in spite of the very conscientious campaigning being done by many people for refugees, this is a problem which will have to be shouldered permanently by the Colony. And whatever assistance we get during the year from outside sources which Government believes may not exceed $40 million, this troublesome, difficult and expensive baby will be left for Hongkong to carry. We are doing that already to the tune of $200 million a year. And when this Refugee Year is over, wouldn't it be best to stop calling them refugees and regard them as Hongkong citizens? For that is what they are and will be for as far ahead as we can see. It would be even unthinkable to lose some of them. Hongkong must accept the fact that they are really nobody's responsibility but our own.

LAOS FIGHTING: BOTH SIDES LOSE HEAVILY

Insurgents Not Taking Prisoners

By BRUCE RUSSELL

Vientiane, Aug. 6. The pro-Western Laos Army has lost seven officers and 300 men in the three-pronged invasion by Communist rebels, the Laotian Army commander, Brigadier-General Ouan Rattikone, said today.

The general in an interview here did not reveal how many of the casualties were dead but declared he believed the Communists were taking no prisoners.

The rebels, claimed to be armed and advised by Communist North Vietnam, had also suffered heavy casualties and the army had the situation in hand at the moment, he added.

Jungle Clashes

Laotian sources said earlier that fighting had now developed into occasional jungle clashes. They said about seven battalions of rebels had penetrated the border from Vietnam at three points.

The Air Laos aircraft which brought me here today was immediately stripped of its seats and loaded with troops and supplies for the extensive front line somewhere south of the rugged mountains that form the North-Vietnam-Laos border. A round-the-clock supply operation is under way at the airport.

Observers here feel the guerrilla war will continue until its cost undermines the Western government of Phou Sananikone. The Communists are believed to be hoping for the return of a neutralist government like that headed by Prince Souvanna Phouma, whom Sananikone replaced last August.

Little Concerned

In Vientiane, Laotians seem little concerned about the disturbances which are occupying the attention of the world's big powers.

Buddhist monks in saffron robes and Laotian women in their brocade showis stroll the streets of this sleepy town apparently unaware of the fighting in the jungle-clad ravines hundreds of miles to the north.

The Communists invaded Sam Neua to the south with six battalions. Three companies retreated to Takheik Province further south to a distance of 50 miles. The Laotian army now had one battalion of regulars and 3,000 civil guards in Phongsavann Province and four battalions of regulars in Sam Neua.

The jungle fighters were being supplied by four Dakotas. General Ouan said that during the last three days no large scale activity had occurred and action was confined to patrols on each side.—Reuters.

Woman Killed

An unidentified Chinese woman was knocked down and killed by a van in Nathan Road, near Wing Sing Lane, at about 5 p.m. yesterday.

She died shortly after admission to Kowloon Hospital.

Sound Waves In Your Milk

London, Aug. 6. Fresh British dairy milk—treated with sound waves—and then frozen solid—is to be marketed throughout the world, it was announced.

The project is being sponsored by the National Research Development Corporation, also backers of Britain's revolutionary "flying saucer". The Hoversons will keep milk fresh for 18 months provided the temperature of the milk itself is kept below eight degrees Fahrenheit. It was evolved by Dr. W. G. Wearmouth at the National Institute for Research in Dairying. Essentially it consists of treating the milk with ultrasonic vibrations of about a million cycles per second for five minutes and then pouring it into containers for quick freezing.—China Mail Special.

'Blitz' Bomb Found In London

London, Aug. 6.

A bomb disposal squad worked feverishly today probing for what was believed to be a leftover 500 lb German bomb near London's famed Tate Gallery.

The bomb disposal unit was at work in a public garden while tourists continued to stream through the gallery looking at its priceless collection of art.

Soil suddenly gave way early today about 30 yards from the gallery in the public garden. To experts, that generally means an unexploded object underground.

A stick of four 500 lb bombs fell across the area one night during the blitz, scarring the Tate and destroying a big chunk of Milbank Military Hospital across the street.

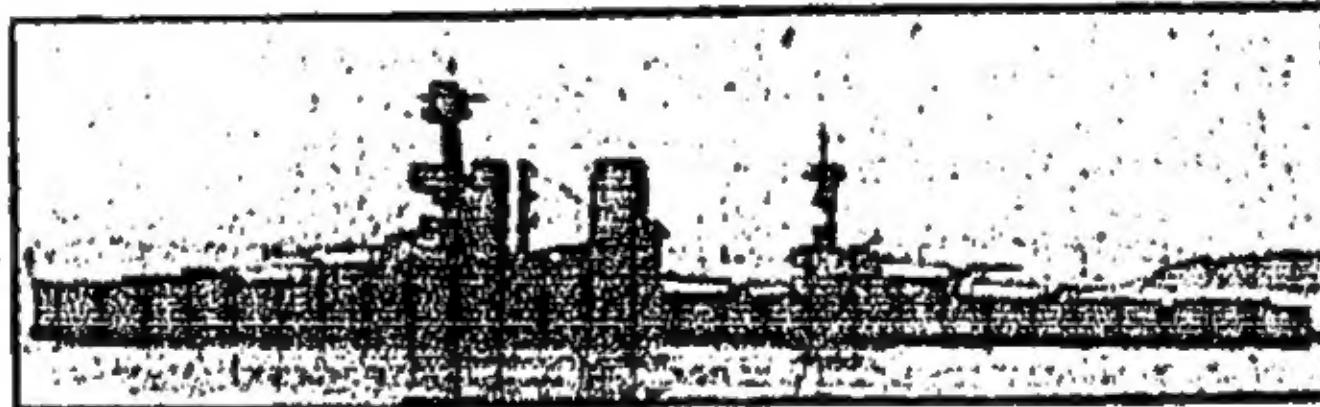

Only three of those bombs were accounted for. Ironically, four ex-German prisoners of war who volunteered for bomb disposal work if they could remain in Britain after the war, were doing the work today.—UPI.

It All Goes To Prove

Windser, Aug. 6. An eight-year-old Birmingham boy, William Dakin, was treated for a slight head injury in hospital here today after he had accidentally collided with a scutty at Windsor Castle.

The collision occurred when the scutty did an "about turn." On Sunday, an American woman alleged she had been kicked by a Coldstream Guardsman outside Buckingham Palace, London.—China Mail Special.

Dramatic Attempt To Escape Storm

The Chilean battleship Almirante Latorre, launched in 1913.

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 6.

Hurricane Dot threatened today to engulf the Canadian tug Cambrian Salvor which was towing the 32,000-ton Chilean battleship Almirante Latorre, across the Pacific Ocean to Japan.

DUG UP OLD COFFIN AND SOLD IT

Frankfurt, Aug. 6. Wilhelm Mohr, a 52-year-old former grave-digger who was alleged to have dug up a coffin shortly after a burial in Kellersbach Cemetery, removed the body and reburied it, and then sold the coffin to a relative, was sentenced to six months imprisonment here today.

The prosecution said Mohr charged with theft and desecration of a grave kept the coffin for four years before selling it.—Reuters.

MRK MAY SEE U.S. MILITARY BASES

Washington, Aug. 6. The Defence Secretary, Mr. Neil McElroy, is prepared to allow the Soviet Premier, Mr. Nikita Khrushchev, to visit some secret military installations when he visits the U.S. next month, Mr. McElroy indicated at his press conference today.

Amongst the installations, banned to the American public, but which Mr. Khrushchev would be allowed to visit if he desired, are the Strategic Air Command bases and the Cape Canaveral missile testing centre in Florida.

Mr. McElroy said he thought it would be constructive if Mr. Khrushchev realised on the spot that the military strength facing the Soviet Union was large, efficient and capable of fulfilling its mission.

LESSENING TENSION

In a general comment on Mr. Khrushchev's visit, Mr. McElroy said it was the first step towards lessening tension. But if this first step was not followed up by efficient measures for strictly controlled disarmament it would not be enough to justify a reduction in the U.S. military effort, he said.

Mr. McElroy added that Mr. Khrushchev said he did not wish to visit U.S. military bases but he might change his mind and want to see everything he could without breaking security regulations.

He added that no decision had yet been taken on the subject. The Pentagon did not expect when it opened certain installations to Mr. Khrushchev that Moscow should make the same concession when President Eisenhower visited the Soviet Union next autumn.—AFP.

'Terrible Deeds Of The RAF During The War'

London, Aug. 6.

Canon John Collins, pacifist Precentor of St Paul's Cathedral tonight spoke of "the terrible deeds" committed by RAF and American aircraft during the war.

"Few voices were raised against the slaughter of 99,000 refugees in Dresden during an allied air raid," he said. "And many Christian voices were silent at the terrible deeds committed by British and American aircraft when they perpetrated carpet bombing on the Germans."

A SYMBOL

"But the 'dreadful horror' wrought on Hiroshima had stirred the conscience of the world. It has become a symbol and it must never be allowed to happen again."

"Whatever Christians might think of war, they should be united in their abhorrence of nuclear warfare."

Canon Collins also read a message from Metropolitan Nicolai, of the Russian Orthodox Church, which urged Christians throughout the world to remember the "terrible crime" of Hiroshima.

Canon John Collins, a leader of the campaign for nuclear disarmament, said that ordinary men and women should tell the politicians: "There should be no nuclear weapons at all."

NO REPETITION

"It was up to Christians throughout the world, both pacifists and non-pacifists, to make sure that there must be no repetition of such horrors as occurred when Atomic Bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki."

"Christians are committed," Canon Collins said, "to a way of life which should bring harmony to the nations of the world."

A large congregation tonight attended a special service in St Paul's Cathedral to mark the 14th anniversary of the dropping of the Atomic Bomb on Hiroshima 14 years ago.—Reuters.

WAGE CUTS

Typists Invade Whitehall

London, Aug. 6.

A thousand Civil Service typists demonstrating against proposed wage cuts this afternoon brought traffic to a halt in Whitehall, where many British Government buildings are situated. They carried banners screaming "Typists Demand a Fair Deal" and "Cold-Blooded Insult."

For the most part young girls, the typists were protesting against the intention of the British Treasury to cut their salaries. Marching to the tune of high heels clattering on the road, the demonstrators descended on Whitehall for a meeting in Whitehall Place, and decided on a motion of protest which they will submit to the Treasury. Meanwhile, 30,000 civil servants were watching the Treasury's move, designed to cut higher salary ranges in order to help the lower paid working groups. The proposed wage cuts are an arbitral administrative tribunal.—AFP.

Councillors May Be Paid To Go To Church

'Rocked' Around The Red Square

Moscow, Aug. 6.
Tommy Steele rocked and rolled around Red Square here today, playing a guitar, singing the latest hits—followed by a crowd of 300 gaping Russians.
The British star started off with his version of "My Bucket Got A Hole In It."
He then, the Russians began to tap their feet and clap their hands to the rhythm.
Afterwards Steele said: "I know they would dig it eventually."
Steele, who is representing Britain at the International Film Festival here, then broke into "Going Home" and "Cranes Are Flying," strumming the guitar he brought to Russia to give to Mr. Nikita Khrushchev, Soviet Prime Minister.
He led the crowd of teenagers across the Square to the gates of the Kremlin before going on a quick tour inside with other British stars.—China Mail Special.

NEW BIRTH CONTROL METHOD 'IMPORTANT FOR FAR EAST'

London, Aug. 6.
A marriage welfare centre here is calling for married women volunteers to test a new system of birth control—but they must be women who want to have babies rather than avoid conception.
They are needed—a hundred of them between 20 and 40—to carry out the initial trials of a family planning method devised by a centre in North Kensington.

For several months they will be asked to adopt the specified system and then give it up. The centre says that if their hopes are then realised, and they become pregnant, it will prove that it was the family planning method which prevented them from conceiving earlier.
The Secretary of the Centre, Mrs. Rohia Peers, described the trial as "of vital importance to Far Eastern countries where women are crying out for a simple method of family planning." Volunteers will have to visit the centre every two months and doctors will keep confidential records.

Preliminary tests, conducted among a few dozen women, were encouraging, the centre says.
Giving an assurance that the new method was harmless, Mrs. Peers said "it is simpler than many methods now commonly accepted."—Reuters.

A Story To Touch Your Heart

Los Angeles, Aug. 6.
A couple who remained separated for seven years so they could adopt two little girls were back together today, the proud parents of the adopted girls.

Mr and Mrs Sing Leong met for the first time since 1952 at international airport when Mrs Leong arrived here with the girls, Mel King, 9, and Cheung Lung, 11.

The Leongs' separation began when the girls' parents died of starvation in China in 1952. Mrs Leong, cousin of the girls' mother, travelled to China and brought them out to Hongkong but there ran into trouble getting an American visa for them.

It took until last month, and with the intervention of the community chest, for the visas to be issued on a non-quota basis so Mrs Leong could join her husband and bring home the two girls.—UPI.

AMERICANS NEED PROTECTION

Ike Asks For Law Against Gangsters

Washington, Aug. 6. PRESIDENT Eisenhower tonight publicly demanded from Congress "a law to protect the American people from the gangsters, racketeers and other corrupt elements who have invaded the labour-management field."

Speaking in a nation-wide television and radio address, the President said the issue of labour reform legislation was an issue of great importance to every American and was above any partisan political consideration.

"I want only effective protection from gangsters and crooks for the people of America—for the men and women who labour with their hands, their minds, their energies, to make America a better place for themselves and for their children," he declared.

Effective

The President said that Americans wanted reform legislation which would be truly effective. "It is my earnest hope that Congress will be fully responsive to an overwhelming national demand," he said.

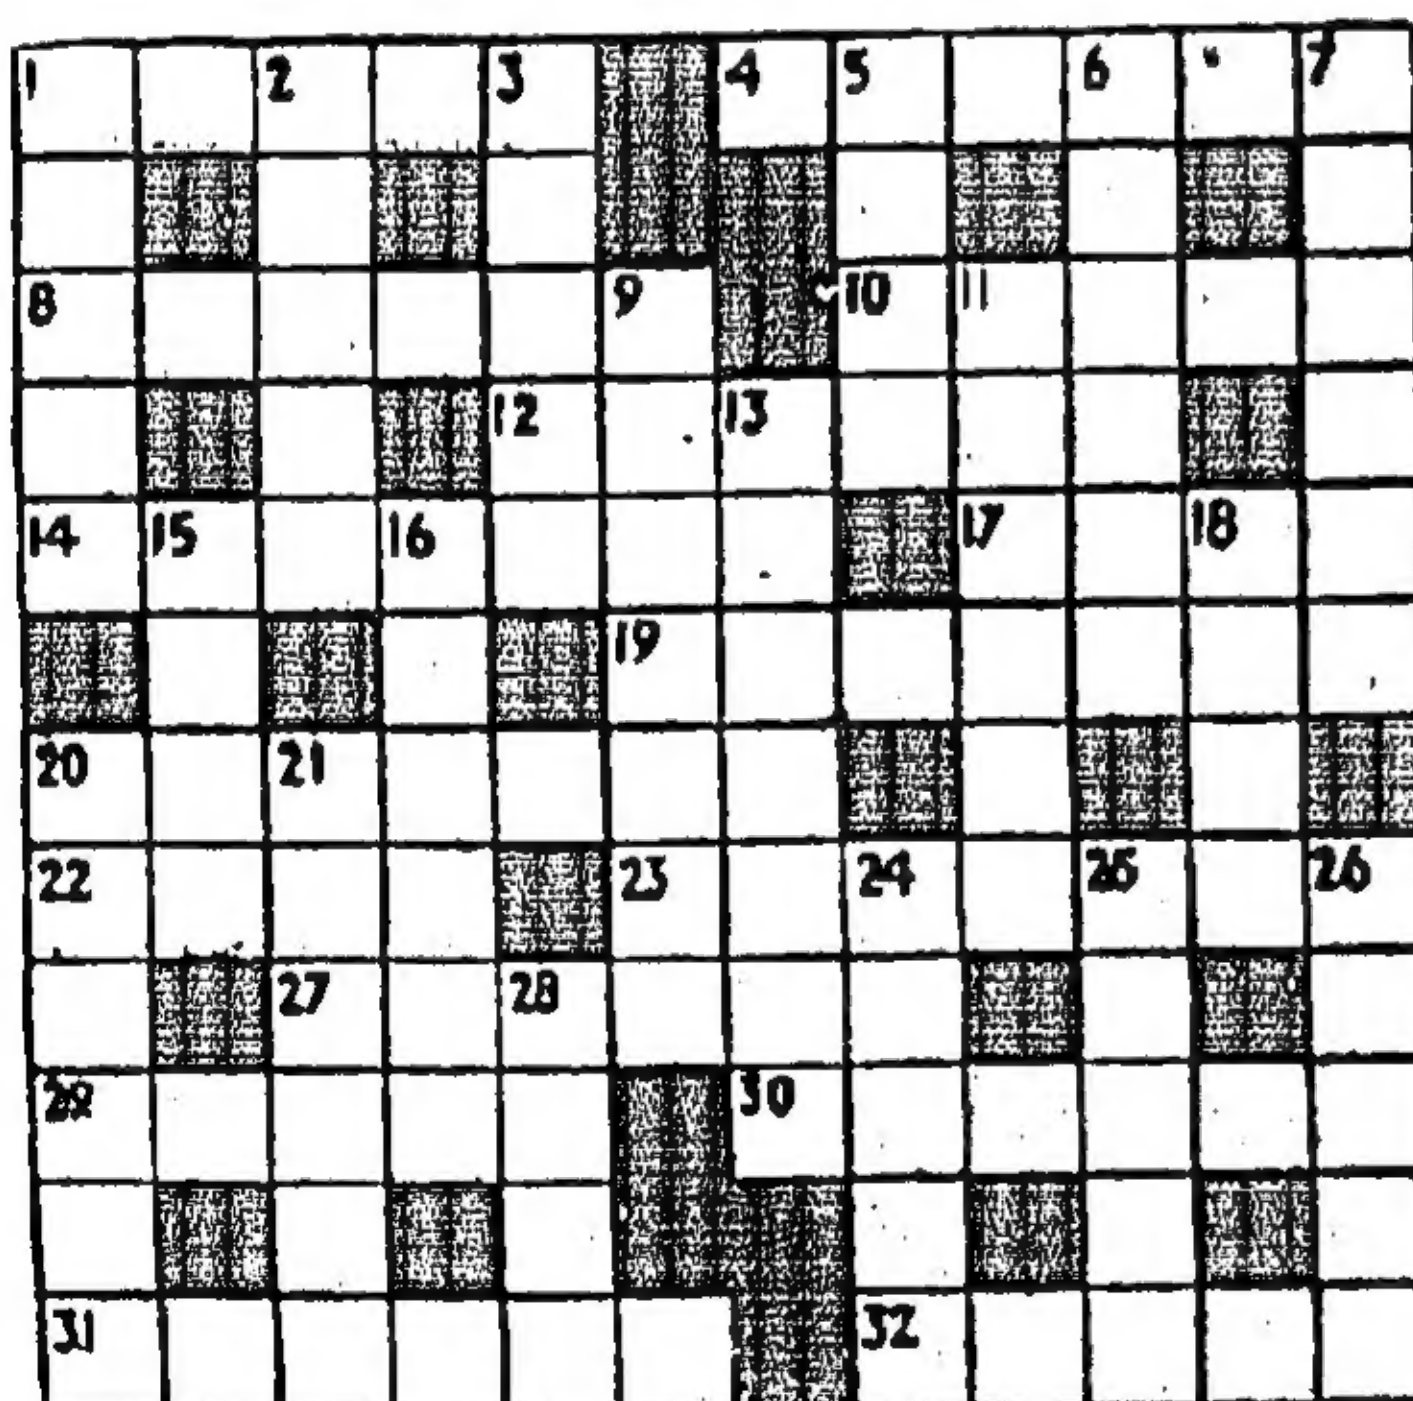

The President, using blunt and forthright language in taking his fight for strong labour legislation directly to the people, asserted that so far Congress had failed to measure up to the requirements he had outlined to protect the American people.—Reuter.

Off Guard

Asbury Park, N.J., Aug. 6. Life guards here have been given permission to speak to pretty girls just because they're pretty.

A city ordinance prohibits the guards from speaking to girls swimming "except strictly in line of duty." City officials have ruled it's their duty for the rest of the month to invite pretty girls to participate in the city-sponsored "Sea-Queen contest."—UPI.

No Insult Intended Hemp Find Starts Search For Dope Leaders

The Hague, Aug. 6. The Dutch Government said in reply to parliamentary questions that a reference by a Dutch navy commander to the Indonesians as "our brown neighbours" was "reprehensible" but did not constitute an insult of the Indonesian people.

The written reply, signed by the State Secretary of Defence, Mr. D. Jong said the Government would "direct" the commander to "pay more attention to his choice of words," but would not take further measures against him.—Reuter.

Liverpool, Aug. 6. CUSTOMS officials were today making country-wide inquiries to trace ring-leaders of a dope peddling gang after finding two hundred-weight of Indian hemp aboard a ship at Liverpool.

The hemp was found in two sacks yesterday when customs men swooped on the 5,800-ton British freighter Yoma in Liverpool docks and searched her from stern to stern.

The sacks were hidden in oil tanks in the propeller shaft tunnel at the after end of the ship.

No arrests have been made.

Worth £30,000

The hemp was estimated by customs officials to be worth over £30,000 if sold on the black market in "reefers" or cigarettes at about five shillings each.

The Yoma, which has a crew of coloured men with white officers, is owned by the British and Burmese Steam Navigation Company. She has a cargo of 3,000 tons of rice meal, and groundnut cake, and had left Bassein, Burma on June 21.

The Yoma had also called at Continental ports and at Avonmouth, Port of Bristol, where a small quantity was also found.—China Mail Special.

Tanganyika Self-Government Prediction

London, Aug. 6. Julius Nyerere, leader of Tanganyika's eight million Africans, announced today after a month of negotiations with the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Alan Lennox-Boyd, that Tanganyika would become self-governing "in the near future and independent within 10 years."

The Edinburgh University-educated leader told a news conference that his nation—now under United Nations trusteeship and administered by Britain—might have its independence now if it were not for pressure from Europeans in Kenya and the Central Africa Federation, scene of recent racial disturbances.

He said the "target date" of independence was no longer important, because he was now satisfied it was coming within the next decade. "I cannot imagine the British continuing to govern Tanganyika for more than five years," he said.

Tanganyika also wants British white civil servants and technicians to stay on after independence, he told the press conference.—UPI.

The Bird

New York, Aug. 6. Two policemen plunged into a street crowd in Brooklyn yesterday and came out, after some struggle, with the object of its excited attention—a large, exotically United bird.

A hastily telephoned bird expert said it sounded like a Mexican road runner, very rare in these parts. The SPCA agent arrived in person, however, and dashed the excitement. He took the Bitter back home to the shore marshes, just a few blocks away.—UPI.

ALLEGED MURDER STRANGLER WITH A CLOTHESLINE

London, Aug. 6. A young plastics worker whose country of origin was stated to be India, used part of his landlady's clothesline to strangle his girl friend in a lovers' lane, the prosecution alleged in court here today.

Hubert James Dugard, aged 21, who once lived in Bombay, was sent for trial at the Old Bailey, charged with the murder of Miriam Anne Young, aged 19, found lying in a brook in North London on July 20.

He pleaded not guilty and received his defence.

GOING TOGETHER

Prosecuting counsel said that the couple had been going out together and as so, often happened at that age, the girl began to earn more money than the man.

"Sometimes young men take these things very seriously," he added.

Dugard was alleged to have cut part of his landlady's clothesline and took it with him when he went to keep a date with Miss Young.—China Mail Special.

POLIO IN U.S. ON INCREASE

Washington, Aug. 6. Eighty-nine paralytic polio cases have this year been reported among people who have received three or more Salk vaccine injections, the Public Health Service announced today.

This represented 9.3 per cent of all paralytic cases, the Service said.

In Atlanta, Georgia, the Government Communicable Disease Centre reported a steady increase in the number of polio cases in the United States.

The Centre said the total number of polio cases was currently 2,050 of which 1,314 were paralytic cases.

The Centre reported 312 new cases during this week, compared to 276 last week, 257 the week before and 178 the week before that.—Reuter.

Unsuccessful Invasion

Taipei, Aug. 6. Communist Chinese troops made an unsuccessful attempt to invade Quemoy at the height of the Communist artillery bombardment of the Nationalist islands last year, it was disclosed today.

Col. Franklin Filman, Army chief of the American Military Advisory Group here, said the only actual invasion attempt the Chinese Communists made on Quemoy in recent years occurred last August 26, three days after the Communists launched one of history's most sustained bombardments.—UPI.

THE QUEEN TAKES A HOLIDAY

London, Aug. 6. The Queen and her family left here by train tonight to begin their summer holiday at Balmoral Castle.

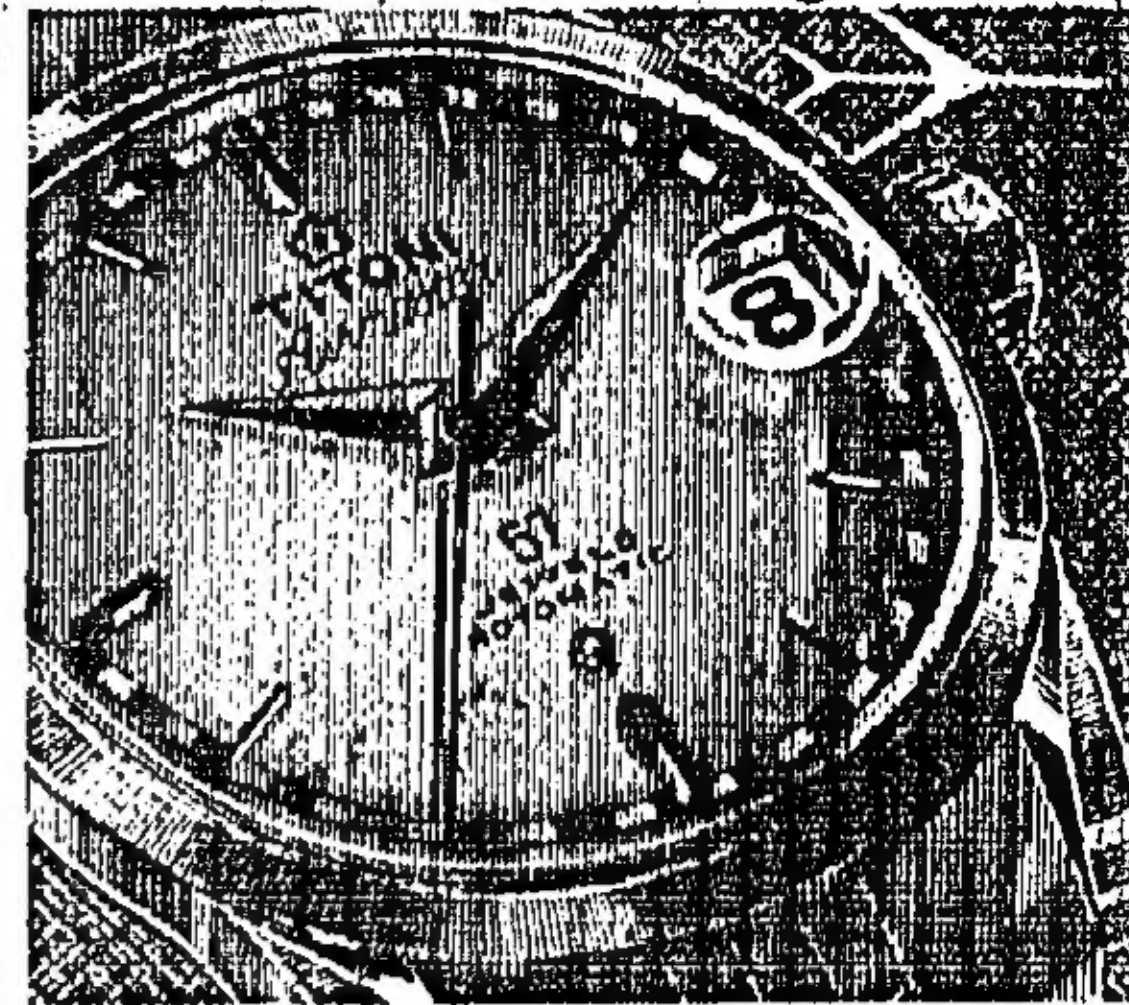

Several hundred people cheered them off from Euston Station.

A little later Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, who has been suffering from a cold, left for the north in another train.

She will stay a few days at the Castle of Mey, her home in Caithness, before going on to Birkhall, on the Balmoral estate.

Princess Margaret is staying in London and will join the Royal Family at Balmoral next week.—Reuter.

SIR PATRICK DEVLIN

Devlin this man of democratic duty

by
JOHN DEANE POTTER

A TAUT-FEATURED, gingery, 53-year-old Irishman, Sir Patrick Devlin, judge of the Queen's Bench, who flew to Nyasaland 12 weeks ago, is the architect of the report which has caused the greatest uproar in Westminster.

His 147-page report was handed to the Colonial Office recently. It follows an investigation which began in April when he flew to Africa following the February riots in Nyasaland.

He began his quiet, careful fact-finding in the tiny town of Zomba, the administrative capital, built on the lower slopes of the 7,000ft. Mount Zomba. In the new contemporary Government building he sat as chairman of the commission, while African policemen, wearing khaki shorts, blue stockings, and black berets, guarded the doors.

A promise

He took evidence from detainees, civil servants, Africans, anyone who wished to come forward. He promised in his gentle, authoritative way at the beginning of the inquiry: "Any civil servant wishing to give evidence may do so without fear that it will ever become known to anyone or it will ever be used against him."

His calm, stiletto-sharp inquiries took him thousands of miles across the cocoa-red soil of Central Africa. He visited Dr. Banda in Gwelo and went to the spot where it was alleged the massacre had been prepared. In a clearing in dense bush country, seven miles out of Blantyre, the main commercial city of water-starved tea and tobacco-growing Nyasaland, he followed a path through the 10ft-high elephant grass marked with leopard and hyena prints.

He was shown metal bottle tops, paper bags, and cigarette ends left by people who met, it was alleged, to plot a massacre.

Friendly

Sir Patrick, amiable, non-committal as ever, inspected the exhibits and returned to Blantyre, where he continued to question African witnesses in his soft, deep voice.

Even the nervous, willing African witnesses soon knew they were in the presence of a friendly, helpful, just man. And a brilliant one, for Patrick Devlin was making £15,000 a year at the commercial bar when, at the extremely young age of 42, he was made a judge.

His most famous case was two years ago when he presided at the trial of Dr. Bucklin Adams, Lord Goddard, then the Lord Chief Justice, said that his summing up in this murder trial was "as impeccable as any I have ever read."

Impact

He is also the first president of the Restrictive Practices Court. There he broke new legal ground in Queen's Bench court No. 7. His work in banning price rings and other restrictive practices was so effective that the court did not sit very often. What sort of a man is this greying red-head, who was Lord Goddard as Lord Chief Justice?

He was brought up as a Roman Catholic, educated at Stonyhurst, and became president of the Cambridge Union.

Mr Justice Devlin, in spite of his Irish ancestry and once-copper hair, appears at first to be a colourless character. Yet he makes an extraordinary impact upon any court he presides over.

He speaks in a neutral, non-accented quiet voice as if he was talking to friends over lunch. The only trace of his Celtic ancestry is shown by an occasional graceful gesture of his long-fingered hand.

Although it has gone along like a well-lunched rocket, there has never been anything dramatic about Devlin's career.

Quiet

He lives with his wife, a daughter of the former African diamond magnate Sir Bernard Oppenheimer, on a 500-acre farm at Pewsey in Wiltshire. He has six children, four boys, and two daughters. But he never is photographed twiggling, scratching, plucking, or walking along a Wiltshire lane in the carefully chosen corduroys of the genteel yokel.

In London, he lives just as unobtrusively in a flat from which he can walk to the Law Courts in a quarter of an hour.

He has no hobbies and only one grave passion, the profession.

He is one of the most jealous protectors of the rights of the individual against the executive. This is an attitude which for centuries has run like an unbroken thread through English law.

And it is a sacred principle that the judiciary will never be swayed or persuaded against the facts by whatever Government is in office.

It is this hallowed democratic liberty which Mr Justice Devlin has so devastatingly upheld in his report on Nyasaland. (London Express Service).

Paris Newsletter from J.W.M. Thompson

Cocteau plans his last film

WITH YUL BRYNNER
AS AN EXTRA

Paris. JEAN COCTEAU is about to change gear again, artistically speaking.

Recently, he has been finishing the redecorating of an old chapel at Milly-la-Foret, outside Paris. This ends his "ecclesiastical" period.

He has recently decorated two other chapels—the French church in London and one at Villefranche, on the Riviera.

Now he is going to make another film; and, although he is only 60, he says it will be his last. Evidently Cocteau means it to be a stirring farewell to the cinema.

Small sums

He says his film will be even more unusual than Blood of a Poet, that strange production with which he startled select audiences years ago. It will be called The Testament of Orpheus.

Cocteau intends to make it for "the elite," because he says he does not see why films should be condemned to seek an immediate success with the masses.

Not surprisingly, this approach has frightened off film producers, who are well known to have the highest possible opinion of an immediate success with the masses.

He is, therefore, making it himself, aided financially by friends. Quite a number of people have put up small sums.

One of them is Yul Brynner, who has contributed HK$30,000 which he won recently at Cannes Casino. He will also serve as an extra.

So quiet

One of the less predictable results of the shake-up in France following de Gaulle has been a whole reappraisal of the tourist business.

It begins to look as though there might be some surprising results.

Anyone who has ever visited Paris in the summer knows that it is something of a ghost city.

Foreign visitors abound, but the Parisians move out in a single-minded quest for sea and sun. The result is that the tourists flood into a city where a great many shops and restaurants are closed and numerous other amenities are running at low pressure.

Today, for example, only half a dozen theatres in Paris (and they number more than 50) are open.

This absurdity, although hallowed by long tradition, is new threatened.

M. Jean Sainteny has been appointed to the new post of Commissioner General of Tourism.

He is a brisk and businesslike man who talks very crisply of what he hopes to achieve.

And I was interested to learn that one of his principal aims is to end this annual "dead season" at the height of the tourist invasion.

Nothing much can be expected this year. Already the characteristic steel shutters, looking fit to withstand a riot, are going up everywhere.

In my quarter, as elsewhere, shopping is becoming laborious. Even the local dairy has closed, and a longish walk is necessary to buy milk.

Things are so quiet, in fact, that Paris is even bothered about running short of blood. At least there is a special appeal for blood donors to replace those on the register who have gone away.

But next year, M. Sainteny promises, things will be different. All shops and restaurants will be open to keep the city alive.

There will also be a "brilliant" programme of events to dazzle the visitors. So he declares.

What bothers the French particularly, of course, is that at the time their capital is closed down for the summer, Rome is a sparkling lure for tourists.

Even so, there is a lot of habit to overcome before Paris can be overcame.

Rumours...

The main subject of Paris gossip has been provided by rumours of an impending break-up in the marriage between Francois Sagan, the novelist, and Guy Schoeller, the publisher.

It is not surprising, in view of their way of life which runs to lengthy separations.

Francois Sagan has spent a large part of this year at Gassin, near Tignes, while Schoeller has been working in Paris.

Mlle Sagan

"When I asked M. Schoeller about reports of an 'imminent' divorce, he told me politely but firmly that they were 'completely untrue'."

And Mlle. Sagan has now left the Mediterranean for Paris again, just when the Riviera is getting into full, fashionable blast. The rumours continue nevertheless.

Meanwhile, Mlle. Sagan has delivered a new novel to her publisher. It will appear in September. Its title: Do You Like Brahms?

I am told she insists it must be spelt like that, with two dots and no question-mark.

Hollywood, stardom—& headaches...

FRANK SINATRA himself said after he and Nancy separated and were divorced, ending ten years of marriage: "We should have been very happy but we weren't."

"I thought another child would help our marriage and we were blessed with Frank Jr. But my endless tours and concerts and night-club engagements and recording dates and business affairs kept me away from home increasingly and we just seemed to drift apart."

by Michael Ruddy part six

"When I was offered a long-term contract by MGM we moved to California and I made up my mind to make our marriage work. No more concerts and tours and one-nighters, no more night-clubs, Nancy, home and family."

Yet the change to films and sunny Southern California with their own swimming-pool in the garden was not favourable.

The tensions increased, and, Frank said, "I seemed to be on edge most of the time and Nancy and I found ourselves getting into awful arguments about the most trivial things."

"We just didn't seem able to get along as I had hoped."

Between pictures and recording sessions, Sinatra went off on USO tours.

you're gonna have an audience with the Pope? These things are arranged months in advance and you just don't have an audience with the Pope, a very, very occupied and busy man."

"Said Frankie, 'That's the trouble with you. You go by rules and standards. Somebody told you something—you never know if you don't try.'"

"This is one of the most courageous kids in the world. He got on the phone and called the American Ambassador's office. They called back within the hour."

"There would be an audience with the Pope at the Vatican at five o'clock."

"So then we called back and asked about the proper attire and everything. Well, the best thing we could wear would be our USO uniforms, military-like, the ones they give you so that if you are captured you are a captain."

"Well, we finally got to the Vatican. Here's a couple of broken-down actors and we were ushered in. The Cardinal in attendance briefed and 'vetted' us on protocol and what exactly we were to do when we met the Pope."

"In the USO set-up, this is very unusual, so Frankie said, 'I wonder—I'm gonna get an audience with the Pope.'"

"So I, with my brilliant sense of humour, said, 'Give me a drag of that. What do you mean, a comedian, me.'"

"He went over to Sinatra first. 'And you my son,' he said. 'Are you a tenor?' And Frankie said, 'Your Holiness, I am a baritone.'"

"Oh, they told me you were a tenor. What opera do you sing?' asked the Pope. Frankie said, 'I don't sing any opera.' And His Holiness said, 'And where do you study?'

"Frankie replied, 'I never studied. I just sang. Your Holiness.'"

"Well, the Pope let out a roar of laughter—a roar for him. To an Italian, if you are a great singer and you don't sing opera and you have never studied, this is a big joke."

Der Bingo

"So the Pope then passed down the line to me. I had some sets of rosy beads and I immediately thought of Bing Crosby. I knew how devout a Catholic Bing is and I knew he would like a memento of the occasion."

"So after His Holiness asked me about myself, I said, 'Does Your Holiness know of Bing Crosby?' and he did immediately."

"I guess 'Going My Way' didn't hurt you know."

"So I asked him to bless the beads and then he gave me two more sets and blessed those as well."

"Finally we left and as we walked down the steps of the Vatican, Sinatra said, 'I bring you to the Vatican and you plug Crosby! My ball!'

In 1940, Frank and Nancy Sinatra separated for the first time. In less than a month, they reconciled, to the gratification of their friends and the unbridled joy of their fans, who sent them telegrams like this: "Please, please, please. You are the most normal family we know. Please, please, keep it that way."

Frank was Hollywood's newest sensation. Because of a pumetured ear-drum, he was never in the forces and he was in the public eye when many Hollywood stars were away.

It was Sinatra, "Night and Day." They say that one glamour queen travelled thousands of miles just to spend a few hours with him.

On June 20, 1940, the Sinatras had another baby, Christina, while he was making "The Miracle of the Bells."

Would a third child work the miracle and keep the marriage together?

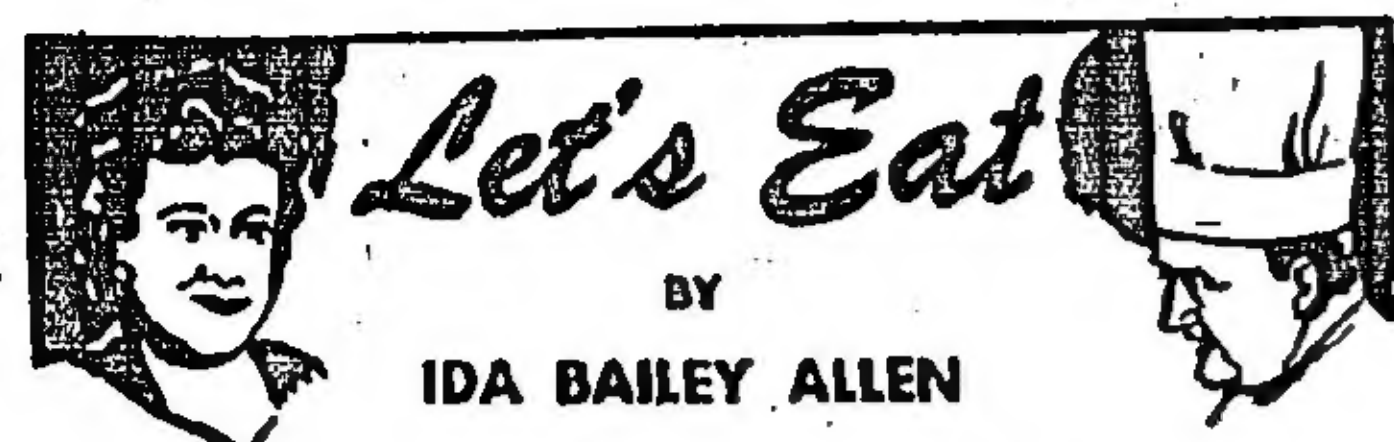

It might have if Frank Sinatra had not gone to a party and met beautiful young brunettes, Ava Gardner, who wrote the most tumultuous chapter of his life.

TOMORROW:

The stormiest chapter of all—marriage to Ava.

Instant Minced Onion Practical Cooking Aid

"It is my considered opinion, Madame, that this new instant minced onion is very useful," remarked the Chef.

"It is onion at its best, vacuum dried, ready to use with no preparation whatever. It reconstitutes in water or any type of hot moisture within 2 minutes and in cold moisture within 5 minutes."

APPETISING DISH

I added a tablespoon of instant onion when pan-frying potatoes. They were soft and delicately browned by the time the potatoes fried. It makes the most appetising onion-scrumpled eggs, gives fine flavour to sauces and French dressing and picks up the flavour of canned fish.

A tablespoon of instant onion added to one-quarter cup water to reconstitute it equals one-quarter cup minced fresh onion; three-quarters of a teaspoon of instant minced onion equals 1 tablespoon minced fresh onion.

"For dishes calling for small quantities of onion, Chef, it is the practical, economical answer," I replied.

APPETISING AND NOURISHING, this creamy soup made with instant minced onion can be ready in five minutes. Good for reducers!

Hot or Iced Coffee or Tea
Combine 1/2 c. instant minced onion, 2/3 c. non-fat dry milk. Gradually add to 4 c. cold chicken or beef bouillon. Mix well.

Add 1/4 tsp. ground white pepper. Stir-cook only until hot. Serve at once. Garnish with parsley. Serves 6.

Note: If desired, replace chicken or beef bouillon with 4 bouillon cubes dissolved in 4 c. boiling water.

The most dangerous talk about families I have heard

TRUST the trick-cyclists to work up a beautiful, logical theory which looks impregnable on paper, but makes no sense in terms of human nature. The big psychiatrists have just announced that it is not a bad thing for children to see their parents quarrel.

"If inoculated with small doses of parental disharmony," said one at the B.M.A. meeting recently, "children become immunised and realise it is the kind of thing that happens in marriage."

"Concealment of parental disharmony," said another, "might result in a build-up of tension. Then the children would see not the long-stooped but the long-strung, but the holocaust that burned down the house."

Lovely metaphors — but do they mean a thing? —

I am quite convinced that most children are bitterly distressed when their parents quarrel.

A happy child looks up to his parents, not in the old awe-struck Victorian way, but with the confidence that they are affectionate and reliable people.

If these affectionate and reliable people start throwing saucers, the child is going to feel shocked, or, at least, embarrassed. (Other people's quarrels are embarrassing to any ONE resident grown-up.) How hideous it is when a husband and wife have a row at a party.)

Dangerous

THESE psychiatrists take the line that children had better not grow up with illusions about marriage.

I think it is much more dangerous to risk choking them off marriage.

I have known girls in their twenties who were terrified of marriage because they had seen so many quarrels at home.

The thousands of children, especially girls, who leave home at the first opportunity, often preferring squallid digs to a comfortable house, usually leave because they were embittered by parental rows.

Another hitch about quarrelling is that it forces the children to take sides.

Real children don't stand back and say "Mummy and daddy are relieving their tensions, soon it will be over and we shall all be well adjusted."

More likely, a boy grinds his teeth and makes plans to fight his father. Or a little girl climbs up to bed saying, "Mummy is a beast, a beast, a beast."

I admit that one of these experts says that parents should not only quarrel in front of their children, but should make it up in public too. But what a lack of reality!

Ten minutes for quarrelling... stay in the room, children dear... and now for a lovely kissy-kissy. This neat thing could only happen in a drawing-room comedy or at a psychiatrist's pow-wow.

My own children have never seen my awful side. They live in the blissful belief that I am 100 per cent wonderful, reliable and superhuman. This keeps them happy and it keeps me on the rails.

I WOULDN'T HAVE IT ANY OTHER WAY.

I HAVE spent a lot of time at the London fashion shows. And I report with some regret that the lady the London designers give us is very, very refuted.

I suspect she holds her tea-cup with a crooked little finger, and I am sure she has never been kissed.

SHE wears understated little black dresses. SHE wears good-taste colours. SHE wears "dressy" afternoon frocks. SHE wears a forbidding hat.

My view —

PERSONALLY, I would like these first London shows, which are for Press and buyers, to cut out the dressy clothes and concentrate on suits and top-coats in woools and tweeds.

The silks and satins, the afternoon and party dresses, mostly pretty but not important, could be shown later to private clients.

The fashion impact would be tremendous. — (London Express Service).

STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Chirpie Takes A Bride

—Love Birds Find Two Can Live As "Cheeply" As One—

By MAX TRELL

KNAIF, the Shadow Boy with the Turned About Name, came running up to his sister, Melody. "I just put some bread crumbs out on the window sill," he said. "They were for Chirpie Sparrow, of course."

"Didn't he come for them?" asked Melody.

"Yes, he came for them all right," said Knarf. "But now I need more bread crumbs—twice as many."

"Twice as many?" said Melody in surprise. "Why?"

"A Lady-Sparrow."

"Because Chirpie brought somebody with him," said Knarf. "What?" asked Melody. "Another Sparrow," said Knarf. "He wants you to meet her. She's a Lady Sparrow. She's very pretty."

"Maybe it's his sweetheart," said Melody. "Maybe he's going to marry her!"

Melody, The Bride

Knarf and Melody quickly got more crumbs. Then they both ran to the window. Sure enough, just as Knarf had said, Chirpie had brought a friend of his. She was smaller than Chirpie and her feathers were finer.

"Good morning! Good morning!" said Chirpie. He bowed several times.

The new little bird stood off to one side, looking a little uneasy as though she weren't quite sure that Knarf and Melody would like her.

"This is my wife," said Chirpie. "Her name is Melody."

"Certainly we would," said Knarf.

At this, Chirpie swallowed a crumb and said: "We're building a nest right now."

"Yes," said Melody. "We found a beautiful place, just under the chimney on the other side of the house between two loose bricks."

Chirpie said: "It's light and roomy and there's a wonderful view of the line where Mother hangs out her clothes."

"I hope you'll be happy there," said Melody.

"I know we will," said Chirpie and Melody, and they both bowed to Knarf and Melody again and to each other.

Then they ate the last crumbs and flew away.

Chirpie presented Melody to Knarf and Melody.

A Love Nest

"I hope," said Melody, as she looked at Melody, "that you're going to build a nest right near us. We'd like you to stay in the neighbourhood, wouldn't we, Knarf?"

"Certainly we would," said Knarf.

At this, Chirpie swallowed a crumb and said: "We're building a nest right now."

"Yes," said Melody. "We found a beautiful place, just under the chimney on the other side of the house between two loose bricks."

Chirpie said: "It's light and roomy and there's a wonderful view of the line where Mother hangs out her clothes."

"I hope you'll be happy there," said Melody.

"I know we will," said Chirpie and Melody, and they both bowed to Knarf and Melody again and to each other.

BORN today, you have a magnetic personality, a lively imagination, a fine mind, and the ability to get just about what you want out of life. In fact, your optimistic attitude seems to attract positive action. You may appear frivolous — sometimes too gay — but underneath there is a practical streak. You are apt to know exactly what you want and will stick to your objective.

Your ideals are high and you aim to reach your goal before too long so that you can spend the rest of your life enjoying yourself. You have that rare combination of intuition and good judgment which, when used together, will bring you to the right decision every time. ## Rupert and Raggety—33

Rupert hurriedly describes Raggety. "He lost his home among the roots of that tree that the window blew down," he says. "He looks rather like a bundle of sticks himself, and..."

"But you shouldn't play with a creature like that!" exclaims the leading Imp. "He isn't safe. You never know what he may do!"

"I know what he may do!" I insist. "He was rather horrid, and he stole my Daddy's pipe. And he jerked at me when I got stuck in the thorns." "Never mind that," the Imps sound nervous. "The point is, where is he now?"

West opened the ten of hearts. East took his ace and returned a spade. West won and played the deuce of hearts. East ruffed and after a little thought, decided that his partner was asking for a club lead. He led the queen of clubs and West ruffed South's king.

Another heart was ruffed by East and he led the jack of clubs. South's ace went down the drain and he still had to lose a spade and a club.

He wound up taking only his five trump and, if it is any consolation to South, which I have seen bigger pots this is the biggest I have ever seen with this good a hand.

JOHANSSON, ROSENSOHN MEET IN PARIS

No Decision Reached On Date Of World Title Return Fight

Paris, Aug. 6. World heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson had a meeting here today with New York boxing promoter Bill Rosensohn to discuss a title bout with Floyd Patterson after Ingo ruled out a proposed Sept. 22 date.

Rosensohn flew in from New York for the meeting with the Swedish boxer. Johansson arrived by plane from Sweden shortly before noon in the company of his adviser Edwin Ahlquist.

Rosensohn said after the conference that "no decision" has been taken about the date of the Johansson-Patterson return bout.

The return match was tentatively scheduled for Sept. 22 at Yankee Stadium, New York, but Johansson reportedly rejected that date.

Promotion Muddle

He said he wanted to know a great deal more about the promotional muddle, which now is under investigation by both the Manhattan District Attorney and the New York State Athletic Commission.

Rosensohn would not immediately reveal the details of his conversations with the champion and Ahlquist. The surprise meeting was reported to have been attended also by Truman Gibson, representing the Jim Norris interests in Chicago.

Gibson was president of the old International Boxing Club, which was dissolved by court order after it was found to be monopolistic, and now heads National Boxing Enterprises, which promotes boxing at Chicago Stadium.

Holds Contract

Rosensohn, who owns only one-third of Rosensohn Enterprises, Inc., which holds the contract signed by Johansson for the return bout with Patterson, had offered earlier this week to sell his one-third interest to Gibson's Corporation.

Gibson ostensibly was in Paris to visit his daughter, a student here.

Rosensohn talked to New York district attorney, Frank Hogan yesterday, then disappeared. It was said he had gone to a secret hideout and was being guarded by city detectives.

However, it was learned that he left New York last night on an overseas flight which brought him to Paris early today. Johansson and Ahlquist just as secretly flew from Sweden to Paris on an early flight today.—UPI.

Inter-Zone Davis Cup Tennis LAVER PLAYS PIETRANGELI TODAY IN OPENING GAME OF ITALY-AUSTRALIA TIE

Philadelphia, Aug. 6. Rod Laver of Australia will face Nicola Pietrangeli of Italy in the singles match that will start the Inter-Zone Davis Cup tennis series between the two countries tomorrow at 2 p.m. (1800 GMT) at the Germantown Cricket Club.

The draw, made today on the centre court of Germantown Stadium, also pitted Neale Fraser, Australia, against Orlando Sirola, Italy, in the second singles match.

The final two singles will be played on Sunday. Laver

The Doubles

The doubles match will be played on Saturday at 1800 GMT.

Vanni Campese, the non-playing Italian captain, said that he would use Pietrangeli and Sirola in the doubles.

Harry Hopman, Australia's non-playing captain, refused to divulge his doubles team. He said he would make it known about one hour before play on Saturday.

In selecting Fraser and Laver, Hopman decided on the use of left-handed players against Italy's right-handers.

Fraser, the veteran of the team, is the top-ranked Australian, and Pietrangeli the No. 1 Italian. Laver and Sirola are the No. 2 players.

Better Form

Hopman said that he selected Laver over Roy Emerson because Laver has been showing the better form. Emerson and Fraser won the Wimbledon doubles championship and Laver was runner-up for the Wimbledon singles title to Alex Onkeno, the U.S. Davis Cup star.

The winner of the Australia-Italy match will play India, Eastern Zone champions, at Brookline, Massachusetts on Aug. 14 to 16. The winner will then challenge the United States for the Cup on August 20 to 28 at Forest Hills in New York.—UPI.

Ex-European Boxing Champion Fined For Stealing

Paris, Aug. 6. Ray Farnoch, former European featherweight champion who once made 4,000,000 francs for four minutes in the ring was convicted last night of a theft equalling one thousandth of that sum.

Farnoch stole the money the night before from a scrub-woman at the Gare De Lyon—a Paris railroad station—where he had been working as a sweeper for a meagre 180 francs an hour. He was given a one-year suspended sentence and fined 5,000 francs or 1,000 times more than his theft.

"I've had no money troubles," he had vainly told his boss at the railroad station. "I'm not a thief. Just give me one more chance."

GREATEST DEFEAT

Farnoch who held the European featherweight title for seven years until the Spaniard, Exuperencia (Fred) Gallana, took it from him on November 3, 1955. He unsuccessfully fought Willy Pep and Percy Bassett for the world championship. His last fight was a losing one against Robby O'Neill in London on October 2, 1956.

But the greatest defeat of his life came one evening during the year of his retirement when he returned home to find that his wife and son had abandoned him.

FAMILY OF BOXERS

Before taking the job at the Gare De Lyon, Farnoch worked at Les Halles—the Paris central market—and in a printing office. He spent his nights in bars reminiscing over his boxing days.

Farnoch comes from a family of boxers. Of his five brothers four—Andre, Emile, Alfred and Lucien—had ring careers. Andre and Emile were French lightweight and featherweight champions, respectively. All of them have retired from the sport.—APF.

English County Cricket Yorkshire Well On Way To Victory Against Middlesex

London, Aug. 6. Yorkshire, who have six wickets standing, need only 40 runs to beat Middlesex at Scarborough tomorrow—a victory which would either narrow the gap or keep them in the hunt for the county cricket title with the holders, Surrey.

After Yorkshire had been set 225 to win, their opener Ken Taylor (53) and Brian Stott (57) hit attractive half-centuries to put them well on the way to victory.

The Middlesex innings was carried by Fred Titmus who hit a splendid 74 including four sixes and four fours after his side had lost three wickets for 10 runs.

Worcester In Lead Surrey emerged pointless from their first innings struggle at Worcester. Though Ken Barrington (99) and Roy Swanton (83) fought hard Worcestershire got the bonus points and a lead of 56 which they extended to 97 without loss.

Jockie Pettiford, Kent's Australian leg-break bowler, checked Derbyshire in his benefit match at Canterbury by taking four wickets in a spell of 14 balls without cost after they had reached 91 for one. But Don Carr restored the position with another fine innings. He needed 13 for his second century of the match at the close.

224-Run Partnership

A partnership of 224 between Ken Suttle (118) and Ted Dexter (125 not out) put Sussex on the way to first innings lead against Nottinghamshire at Trent Bridge. With seven wickets left, Sussex wanted another 51 runs to pass Nottingham. Suttle batted four hours 10 minutes and hit 14 fours.

Dexter, after three and a half hours, had hit a six and 20 fours. Reg Simpson, who was 120 not out for Nottingham overnight, added another 12 this morning, batting just over four hours and hitting 15 fours.

Scores

Close of play scores in today's matches followed:

At Scarborough: Middlesex 144 and secondly 164 (F. Titmus 74, B. Close five for 75). Yorkshire 84 and secondly 185 for four (K. Taylor 53, W. Stott 57, D. Pridgett 48 not out).

At Leyton, Essex 304 for six declared and secondly 23 for two. Gloucestershire 329 (A. Milton 99, R. Nicholas 64).

William Tilden, Helen Wills Roark Elected To The Tennis Hall Of Fame

Newport, R.I., Aug. 6. William Tilden and Helen Wills Roark, who ruled the tennis world in the "Golden 20's", today were elected to the game's Hall of Fame.

The announcement was made by the Board of Governors of the National Lawn Tennis Hall of Fame and Tennis Museum. Tilden, who died in 1953, and Mrs. Roark were chosen on the basis of their records between 1920 and 1923.

America's Top Stars

The enshrinement ceremonies will be held at the Hall of Fame in the Newport Casino on Aug. 15, the day of the semi-finals of the Newport Invitation tournament.

Tilden and William Johnson won the Davis Cup in 1920 and kept it in America through 1924 with assistance from Vincent Richards, R. Norris Williams Jr. and Watson Washburn. In those seven years, Tilden lost only one match in singles in the challenge rounds. Mrs. Roark won the Wimbledon championship seven times. Both compiled brilliant records while representing the United States in international competition.

Gary Chapman Retires From Swimming

Sydney, Aug. 6. Gary Chapman, 21-year-old Australian swimmer who once held every Australian freestyle record from 220-yards to the mile, announced today that he is retiring from swimming to concentrate on work in his father's sports store.

Chapman explained that he could not mix training and the store work without affecting his health. He had not been a competitive swimmer this year, but it had been expected he would return to action next year and attempt to make the 1960 Olympic team.

Chapman reached his peak at the age of 16, when he held all the major Australian freestyle records. In 1954 he was the Empire Games 440-yard champion, and in the 1955 Melbourne Olympics he took third place in the 100-metre freestyle.—UPI.

Rugby's Scoring System Needs Revision

VALUE OF A TRY SHOULD BE RAISED AND THAT OF A PENALTY GOAL DECREASED

Says DEREK JOHN

The All Blacks' farcical victory over the British Lions—by six penalty goals to three tries, a goal and a penalty goal—has once again raised the thorny problem of the value of tries and penalties.

The problem is being discussed this month at the meeting of the International Rugby Football Board in New Zealand. And it is my hope that they will raise the value of a try and decrease the value of a penalty goal.

The danger is that the legislators will judge the All Blacks' 18-17 win to be a freak result, since the incredible number of 35 penalties was awarded by referee Alan Flourey.

But a review of rugby scoring is long overdue. In the past few years I have never seen so many international matches decided by kicking rather than by try-scoring ability.

Life-Blood

There was a time when you couldn't win a rugby match without scoring a try. Nowadays, you can't expect to win international matches without a top-class kicker.

Take the 1957-58 season, for example. England scored only five tries in four matches to win the International Championship, while Ireland (eight tries) finished at the bottom of the table.

Tries are the life-blood of rugby. And a higher premium should be placed on them if we are to encourage attractive, open play.

All praise to a place-kicking genius like full-back Don Clarke, the massive 16-stone All Black who kicked all New Zealand's points in the First Test against the British Lions.

Greater praise, however, is due to the lion-hearted British players who crossed their opponents' line four times to score brilliant tries.

Rugby is essentially a handball game and a team game. So achievements through team work and handling skill rate much higher in my book than the fancy footwork of one individual.

But do not presume that the Lions' shock and undeserved defeat will automatically spur the legislators into action.

At Cape Town, in 1949, the brilliant Springbok forward Aaron ("The Boot") Gellin kicked five penalty goals to give South Africa a 15-11 win over the All Blacks. No changes were made in the scoring.

The last change came in 1949, when the value of a dropped goal was reduced from four points to three. Now I'd like to see four points awarded for a try—and the value of a penalty goal reduced from three points to two.

French XV Falls Apart

Rugby players who would especially welcome such a change in scoring are the blue-shirts of France, who concentrate on the fast, open game with spectacular results.

Last season, France won the International Championship for the first time since they entered the competition half a century ago. But I cannot see them repeating that success with the present scoring system.

The reason: They have lost four star players, including Pierre Lacaze of Lourdes, the tiny elusive full-back who is so brilliant at drop-kicking and place-kicking.

Turned Pro

Aerobatic Lacaze, an equally brilliant passer player, took a major part last year in helping France to become the only country to win a rugby try series in South Africa this century.

Now he has turned professional by joining the Rugby League, along with two other members of last year's victorious French fifteen—Jean Barthe, the famous Lourdes forward, who is just about the best No. 8 in the business, and A. Quaglio, the prop forward.

Fortunately, the great Vannier will be fit next year and this in all the top left by Lacaze. But Barthe and Quaglio will be difficult to replace.

Irreplaceable

And France has lost one player who cannot be replaced adequately. He is Lucien Mias, the Napoleon of French Rugby, who led and inspired his men to great victories last season. Mias has given up the game to become a country doctor.

Mias was unfit for the match at Twickenham last season and his absence immediately had disastrous results. The pack was reduced to a chattering, disorganised rubble and the Frenchmen fell back into their bad old ways, playing as fifteen individuals instead of as a united team.

Even if the value of a try is increased, I shall be pleasantly surprised if France can retain the championship after losing such valuable players and their greatest-ever leader.

MATTHEWS NOW HAS A STRONG CHALLENGER FOR HIS POSITION

Stanley Matthews, 45 in February, but still the biggest name in football, has a strong challenger for his position—for the first time in more than 20 years. Arthur Kaye, England "Under 23" cap transferred from Barnsley for £15,000, is the lad after Stanley's job.

And, despite all the "we're good pals" talk, I can tell you that this is a no-holds-barred tussle.

This is a fight to the death, predicted by some as the greatest forward ever produced in England.

Kaye has recovered from the injury trouble which caused him to have such a dismal 1958-59 season. Yes, he's fit, and rearing to go. Pressing home his challenge, young Arthur moved house last week, several months before he had intended calling in the removals van.

At the same time, the great Matthews will not surrender his position without a real struggle. In fact, Stanley has secretly trained right through the summer, determined to prove that he'll take more than a birth certificate to put him out of big-time soccer.

To quote Blackpool boss Ron Stuart: "Matthews is extremely fit, and obviously feels the benefit of twice-daily training."

And when I tackled Stanley about his future plans, he stated quite definitely: "I have not thought about the future, because I have no plans to give up playing."

The battle for possession of position has already started. My pre-season tip is that Stanley Matthews will retain his job, but that Arthur Kaye will be breathing down his neck. If injury, or the need for a rest, causes the maestro to miss a game, Kaye will cash in and try to take over PERMANENTLY.

8 Test Centuries

Then again, he gathered eight Test centuries—from the West Indies, New Zealand, South Africa and Australia—with fine impartiality, and had 102 hundreds in all.

He notched a double century against the Gentlemen for the Players, again in his top 1933 season, while way back in 1920 he achieved his best wicket-keeping season with 137 victims. That is a record as his 413 stumpings.

Warwickshire Take 72-Run First Innings Lead Over India

Birmingham, Aug. 6.

Wicketkeeper Jack Fox and off-spin bowler Basil Bridg, both hit the first half-centuries of their careers for Warwickshire against the Indians at Edgbaston here today sharing an exhilarating seventh wicket stand of 78 in 48 minutes.

Five sixes came during the stand which enabled Warwickshire to declare at 356 for eight, and give them a lead on the first innings of 72.

The Indians made 25 without loss by the close.

Four Sixes

He hit Naddkari for three sixes—two in one over—and Borde for another six to reach 50 in 43 minutes which also included four fours.

Fox was bowled at 336 but Bridge carried on to finish up as top scorer with an undefeated 56 (one six and five fours) at the declaration.

Earlier, the Indians had done better by dismissing four leading Warwickshire batsmen for 102 while Jimmy Stewart had retired hurt after being struck on the arm by Ramakant Desai.

Record For Smith

Skipper Mike Smith and opener Fred Gardner hit widely dissimilar half-centuries in the early part of the county's innings.

Smith, the leading English run-getter this summer, was dominant and showed attractive strokes throughout his 75 minutes' stay for 52 which included eight fours and a six.

Gardner began well but struggled for runs during the latter part of his two and three-quarter hours effort to finish with 51.

During his innings Smith beat Klinger's record of 2,114 runs made in 1933 — for Warwickshire in a season.—REUTERS.

FAMOUS SPORTS STARS I HAVE MET

By ARCHIE QUICK

Besides being the finest wicketkeeper-batsman of all time, Leslie Ames possesses one other distinction—he is the only manager of a county cricket club.

Stocky, swarthy and saturnine Leslie is not given to using two words where one will do, but he waxes enthusiastic about Kent's future and the success of the Second Eleven Competition.

"The starting of this competition is the finest thing that has happened to English cricket since the War," he told me at Maidstone, and for Ames that is quite a speech.

Kent are doing well in the Second Eleven tournament, and for that the club has to thank Ames for the way in which he has organised scouting and coaching systems among clubs and schools.

'Sowed Well'

The products of the schemes are just beginning to come along. As a County Committeeman so nicely put it: "Ames sowed well, and now we are reaping the harvest." There are, I understand, at least three players ready to be "blooded" in the senior eleven—two batsmen and a fast bowler. Although Kent's great need is a successor to "Tich" Freeman and Doug Wright.

Ames, now 53 years old, had a unique career.

Although he made 413 stumpings and goodness knows how many catches, and took eight wickets in a Test Match against the West Indies at the Oval in 1933, he still found time to aggregate 37,245 runs.

He scored 2,434 runs in Tests, passed the 1,000 mark in a season on 17 occasions, and had a total of 3,038 runs in that same said season of 1933.

8 Test Centuries

Then again, he gathered eight Test centuries—from the West Indies, New Zealand, South Africa and Australia—with fine impartiality, and had 102 hundreds in all.

He notched a double century against the Gentlemen for the Players, again in his top 1933 season, while way back in 1920 he achieved his best wicket-keeping season with 137 victims. That is a record as his 413 stumpings.

What is more he holds the fourth wicket Test record against South Africa (with Wally Hammond), the fifth wicket best stand against New Zealand (again with Hammond) and the eighth wicket top partnership against New Zealand (with "Gubby" Allen).

His 1,910 runs and 121 wickets in 1928 is another all round feat which has never been equalled. Or likely to be, for there are no wicket-keepers of Ames' batting class these days.

Although he came into the England team as the natural successor to the lequacious George Duckworth behind the stumps he would also have won his place for his batting alone at a time when England was embarrassed with batting riches.

Mike Wilding
Meets
Liz Taylor—

IN A FOURSOME WITH EDDIE FISHER AND
SUSAN NELL

London.
EDDIE FISHER and his wife Elizabeth Taylor went out on the town with Michael Wilding—Elizabeth's former husband—and his wife Susan. It was the first time that the foursome had been seen together in public in London.

As they sat in a corner of the smart River Club, the all-Negro calypso band played "It's Been So Long."

Liz and Michael Wilding talked gaily with each other, as Eddie Fisher—wearing a blue tuxedo—and Mrs Wilding were deep in conversation behind Liz Taylor's back.

The gay party drank champagne as guests poured in to dance in the darkened night club overlooking the Thames.

Secret

Michael Wilding and his wife—formerly Susan Nell—arrived first in a small green car. A few minutes later Liz Taylor and Eddie drew up in a chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce. The visit was kept a close secret and they were ushered straight way into the darkest corner table, far from the dance floor.

During the whole of the dinner party—as guests and a group of debutantes stared at the famous foursome—not one of the four got up to dance.

With the champagne came steak au poivre and smoked salmon. Afterwards... brandy and coffee.

I noticed, just before midnight, when they all left rather hurriedly, that Michael had a last word to say to Liz Taylor. He leaned across and told her a joke. She laughed and then the party swept out.

Leaving a rather noticeable bubble of excitement among the club's regular patrons.

Drama for the groom

In his role as aspiring author, 21-year-old Tom Chetwynd—the boy from the Elephant and Castle—can hardly help but be intrigued by the situation that has arisen over his wedding to the beautiful French Baroness Helene de Bosmelet.

For there has been an angry rumble from the Bosmelet chateau in Normandy. From Madame Soyer de Bosmelet, his fiancée's grandmother and the oldest member of the family.

And, in his 30s—a week, two-roomed flat in Deacon Street, Chetwynd explained to me: "Helene's grandmother is determined not to come to the wedding."

"You see, she thinks that a de Bosmelet should marry in the family chapel in the grounds of their chateau in Normandy."

But the couple hope to sway grandmother. "We are hoping she will come over after all," said Chetwynd. The date is set for October 2 at the Roman Catholic church in Farm Street, London.

Chetwynd—cousin of a famous Chetwynd, son of writer Bridget Chetwynd—met the baroness, art student and ex-debutante daughter of rich international lawyer Pierre de Bosmelet, at a cocktail party, in May.

A Lonely Life

MAJOR HENRY DOUGLAS-HOME, brother of the Earl of Home, is leading a lonely life on his 300-acre farm at Old Greenlaw, Berwickshire. His only companion is his daughter, Flora, 22. His Norwegian wife, Vera, is living in the South.

"She has not been at Greenlaw for many months," Major Douglas-Home tells me. "She finds it too quiet. But I have told her that I cannot afford to leave her. I never hear from her now, but this is still her home as far as I am concerned."

"There is nothing new about a situation like this. It is happening to people all the time."

Major Douglas-Home is the father of Mr Robin Douglas-Home, who married model Sandra Paul recently. The major, who is a regular broadcaster on country life, married lovely Vera Johansen of Oslo in 1947. She is his second wife, and they have a 10-year-old son, George, who is at present at a private school in Scotland.

Major Douglas-Home's first wife was Lady Margaret Spencer, sister of Earl Spencer. The marriage was dissolved in 1947.

Major Douglas-Home is a missionary in Siam and Ethiopia, while her fiancée out a promising career in architecture to work with the tribes on the borders of Paraguay, the Argentine, and Brazil.

THE BRIDE

EX-SHOWGIRL Sheila Wood became a comtesse when she married 20-year-old Chetwynd. Comte Reila de Cachard at Chelsea register office. "But you can just call me 'madame,'" she said. "People don't call people 'comtesse' these days, do they?"

"Yes," I said. "They do."

Impressive

The blonde comtesse thought it over a moment. "Well," she said, "maybe when I'm 50, you can call me 'comtesse.' I think it sounds very impressive. But it calls for a title. And you can't buy a title in England now, can you?"

"Yes," I said. "You can."

"There was a moment of consultation with the count. 'Reggie,' says he'll buy me one when I'm 50," said madame.

The man who wouldn't talk — Dr Roberto Arias.

A missionary match

THIRTY-TWO-YEAR-OLD Dr Antoinette Hallett, the daughter of the former High Court Judge, Sir Hugh Hallett, is to marry 43-year-old Mr Albert Harland, member of a celebrated Ulster family.

Mr and Mrs Harland will start their life together, not in the green glens of Antrim but as missionaries among the primitive Indians of the Gran Chaco country in South America.

Last week Miss Elba Anderson, Harland's half-sister, told me from the Harland home in County Antrim.

"She is a most courageous girl to go out to this country. They are miles and miles away from anywhere, the land is very arid, and the natives are extremely primitive."

Not that Dr Hallett is unaware of the rigours of mission work. Already she has been a missionary in Siam and Ethiopia, while her fiancée out a promising career in architecture to work with the tribes on the borders of Paraguay, the Argentine, and Brazil.

Jayne's man

JAYNE MANSFIELD is going to make a film. And the man who is going to partner her is none other than Leo Genn, the good chap of British films.

Down at his country place, near Horsham, recently Mr Genn left his chickens for a while to talk about Miss Mansfield and their film, script-called at the moment — "Too Hot To Handle."

I have only seen Jayne twice. The first time, when I met her at a party in America, she was an unknown—as we all are in the beginning.

Then I saw her in a play in New York. I am looking forward to meeting her before we start shooting later this month."

'SUPREMO'S' TROUT

SOME have stately homes near a tourist route where a weekend trade at a shilling a head will yield a fortune. Others have a family museum or art collection that can more than pay its way.

But Earl Mountbatten, Chief of Defence Staff, has a more unusual money-spinner. He lives—at his Broadlands, Hants, estate—on the River Test, the classic trout stream of England.

"I rent it out," he told me from his office desk in Whitehall. "You've got to do it these days in order to run a big estate."

"I have a three-mile stretch of the river which is divided into several beats. I keep a little boat for private use and for my guests."

The record catch on the Test was made by the "Supremo's" son-in-law, Lord Brasenose. He caught an 8½lb. trout on a mayfly.

TOP SECRET

SIR GERALD TEMPLE'S 25-year-old daughter, Jane, has been left nearly £60,000 by her great aunt, Miss Annie Davie, of Stoneleigh, Devon.

But the former Chief of the Imperial General Staff has decided not to let his daughter talk of her inheritance.

Last week at his London home he told me: "No, Jane can't talk to you. And nor will I."

Jane is soon to be married to 28-year-old Morgan O'Donovan, the son of Brigid, the O'Donovan, of Skibbereen, Co. Cork.

THE WILL was published last week of Count Michael Torby, uncle of the Marquis of Milford Haven and brother of wealthy Lady Zia Wernher. The count, who died in April aged 60, was a regular member of the Royal Family's shooting parties and a keen painter. He left £41.6s. 10d. Net, that is.

And all on account of a wisdom tooth.

"He has had a very difficult time," Mrs Betjeman told me.

"His whole system was poisoned—he's going to have to keep on a careful diet when he's up."

The return of Doctor
Arias...CHAPTER THREE:
MYSTERY MISSION
IN LONDON

THE evolutionary Dr Roberto Arias—ambassador, revolutionary, and now tight-lipped business man—recently completed a mysterious mission to London.

Now we have wondered about Dr Arias in those drear days of the Panama revolution; we have worried about Dr Arias when he was missing.

We sighed with relief for him and his wife, Dame Margot Fonteyn, when he took safe refuge in the Brazilian Embassy in Panama when he finally made it to freedom in Brazil.

And when he flew into London from Rio we thought that perhaps Dr Arias might fill in a few gaps in his story.

But the orders went out: "Nothing is to be said about my visit."

He drove to Dame Margot's Kensington home. He was out early the next day—"He has many appointments to keep during the week," said a member of the staff.

And so...

A close friend said he was in London on business.

At the house a blue-suited butler said: "Dr Arias will see nobody. He has a dinner engagement and is going to stay with friends in the country."

A few hours later Dr Arias was in Kensington and packing his bags into a car for London Airport.

A telephone call to the house brought the response: "Dr Arias has left. He has just gone to the Continent—Paris, Brussels or somewhere."

"He is on his way back to Rio. He wants to see his wife and dance. Who am I? Well, I'm the cook."

And so a reluctant farewell to Dr Arias. In the old, more leisurely days he was more talkative.

Poisoned poet

PRINCESS MARGARET'S favourite poet, John Betjeman, is in bed on a diet of glucose and water at his country cottage home at Wantage, Berks.

And all on account of a wisdom tooth.

"He has had a very difficult time," Mrs Betjeman told me.

"His whole system was poisoned—he's going to have to keep on a careful diet when he's up."

WAY
by Beachcomber

A REFERENCE to the "conventions of love lyrics" brought to mind Captain Foulness' unconventional love song, composed when he was weary of a certain lady:—
Oh, wind blowing over the sea,
Blow, my true love from me.
One nighty puff
Will be enough
To land her in the sea, my lady,
To land her in the sea.

What next?

A N indignant clothier protested the other day against men who make themselves ridiculous by wearing coats too large for them. The wizard Cagliostro once guaranteed to take 25 years off the life of a middle-aged lady. She was cut when he called, so he left his magic potion with a 30-year-old maid-servant, who drank the stuff. When her mistress returned and rang for her, in stumbled a little girl of five, still dressed in the maid's clothes, which almost hid her from sight.

Evans v Balzarotti

AFTER six hours, and with only 11 yards to go, Balzarotti, 14ft 6in Evans, attempted a spurt, but he was obviously tiring. The frenzied crowd roared and threw their hats in the air, as Evans neared the winning post. Balzarotti's supporters from Italy shouted advice and encouragement, but Evans hammered away with that nose which he insured for £221,000. Relentlessly he increased his lead and passed the post with a classic jab which almost lifted his pea from the ground. With a glistening speech the mayor's wife handed Evans the golden pen and the cup—the latter filled with Welsh champagne. Both men drank greedily from it. Thus ended one more attempt to wrest the championship from the world of the arch Druid—"The greatest nasal pea-pusher of all time."

Bus service to Moscow

JOHN COCHRANE, 23-year-old son of Air Chief Marshal Sir Ralph Cochrane, clocks in at London Transport's Chislewick training centre soon and hauls himself aboard a red double-decker bus. After four days of intensive training on just how to get a double-decker out of the tightest corners, John hopes to drive away to Moscow in 20-year-old EX2 248.

With 40 other Oxford undergrads, he has paid £50 to buy the bus.

The party too is 18-year-old Viscount Wolmer, the Earl of Selborne's grandson and heir. He told me: "If all the Oxford chaps who put their names down for this trip had decided to go, we would have wanted a fleet of double-deckers—there were about 300 altogether."

Dignity and the MP's

FREDDIE BENNETT, the Tory member for Torquay, said that the M.P.'s swimming race wasn't quite the thing. "Parliament," he said, "would be held to ridicule."

At that moment Freddie Erroll, Economic Secretary to the Treasury, was poised on the diving board of Torquay's new swimming pool. He was wearing a pair of swimming shorts decorated with chickens and eggs—a present from his wife.

Said Mr Erroll: "Ridiculous. What on earth is wrong with a few politicians sporting their figures in a swimming pool? We can't be serious all the time."

And having issued this challenge Mr Erroll dived in. But I am sorry to report that he was the only one of the five from the Commons not to mention Lord Tweedsmuir from the Lords—who got his costume wet.

The politicians had gone down to Torquay over the weekend to see the pool opened.

The split over the issue of the politicians' race was carefully sealed later—over cocktails at Mr Bennett's castle home at Dartmouth.

And all on account of a wisdom tooth.

"He has had a very difficult time," Mrs Betjeman told me.

"His whole system was poisoned—he's going to have to keep on a careful diet when he's up."

Judge Orders Endorsement On Licence To Be Changed

In the Appeals Court this morning, Mr Justice A. D. Scholes dismissed a man's appeal against his conviction on a careless driving charge but ruled that his driving licence be correctly endorsed.

The appellant, Otto T. L. Petersen, said he had been convicted of careless driving but his licence had been endorsed for dangerous driving.

Government Appointments Gazetted

The Government Gazette announced today the following appointments, promotions, transfers and postings:

Mr W. E. Munson and Mr T. N. Leach-Bennett, Trade Officers, to be Senior Trade Officers; Mr A. G. Trickett, Assistant Trade Officer, to act as Trade Officer.

Dr Frances Chan Yu-sui to be Woman Medical Officer. Messrs Aw Wai-bing and Lau Wai-sik ceased to be Sub-Inspectors of Schools. Mr J. Bodilly, resumed duty as Crown Counsel. Mr Howe King-hong to be an Assistant Labour Officer. Mr Lau Yiu-cheung to be an Assistant Registrar.

The grounds he laid down for his appeal against his conviction for careless driving were that he did not receive specific notification of charges to be brought against him and that the form on which the charges were laid out was bad; and that there was a misdirection given by the Magistrate in his summing up.

COMPLIED

Mr Scholes said that he was all set that the notice given to Mr Petersen of the charges to be made against him complied with the Traffic Ordinance in that it specified the nature of the offence, the time and place. It was all set to have occurred and the charges to be brought against the offender.

The said ample evidence was given to the Magistrate in the Lower Court of careless driving and from his notes there was no misdirection. "I can therefore see no merit for this appeal and rule that it be dismissed. However, the appellant's licence has undoubtedly been wrongly endorsed and I order that it be properly endorsed with careless driving."

From the Files 25 years AGO

The local Indian community suffered a loss yesterday in the passing of Mr Hashim Runjahn. He was 59 and was survived by four sons, three daughters and two brothers, Messrs U. and D. Runjahn.

BEHIND lines of troops and police, in an auditorium from which the people of Berlin were excluded, guarded by picked men and with his very colleagues under close surveillance, Adolf Hitler, successor to Reichspresident von Hindenburg, in his Reichstag funeral oration yesterday paid a ringing tribute to the great Field Marshal.

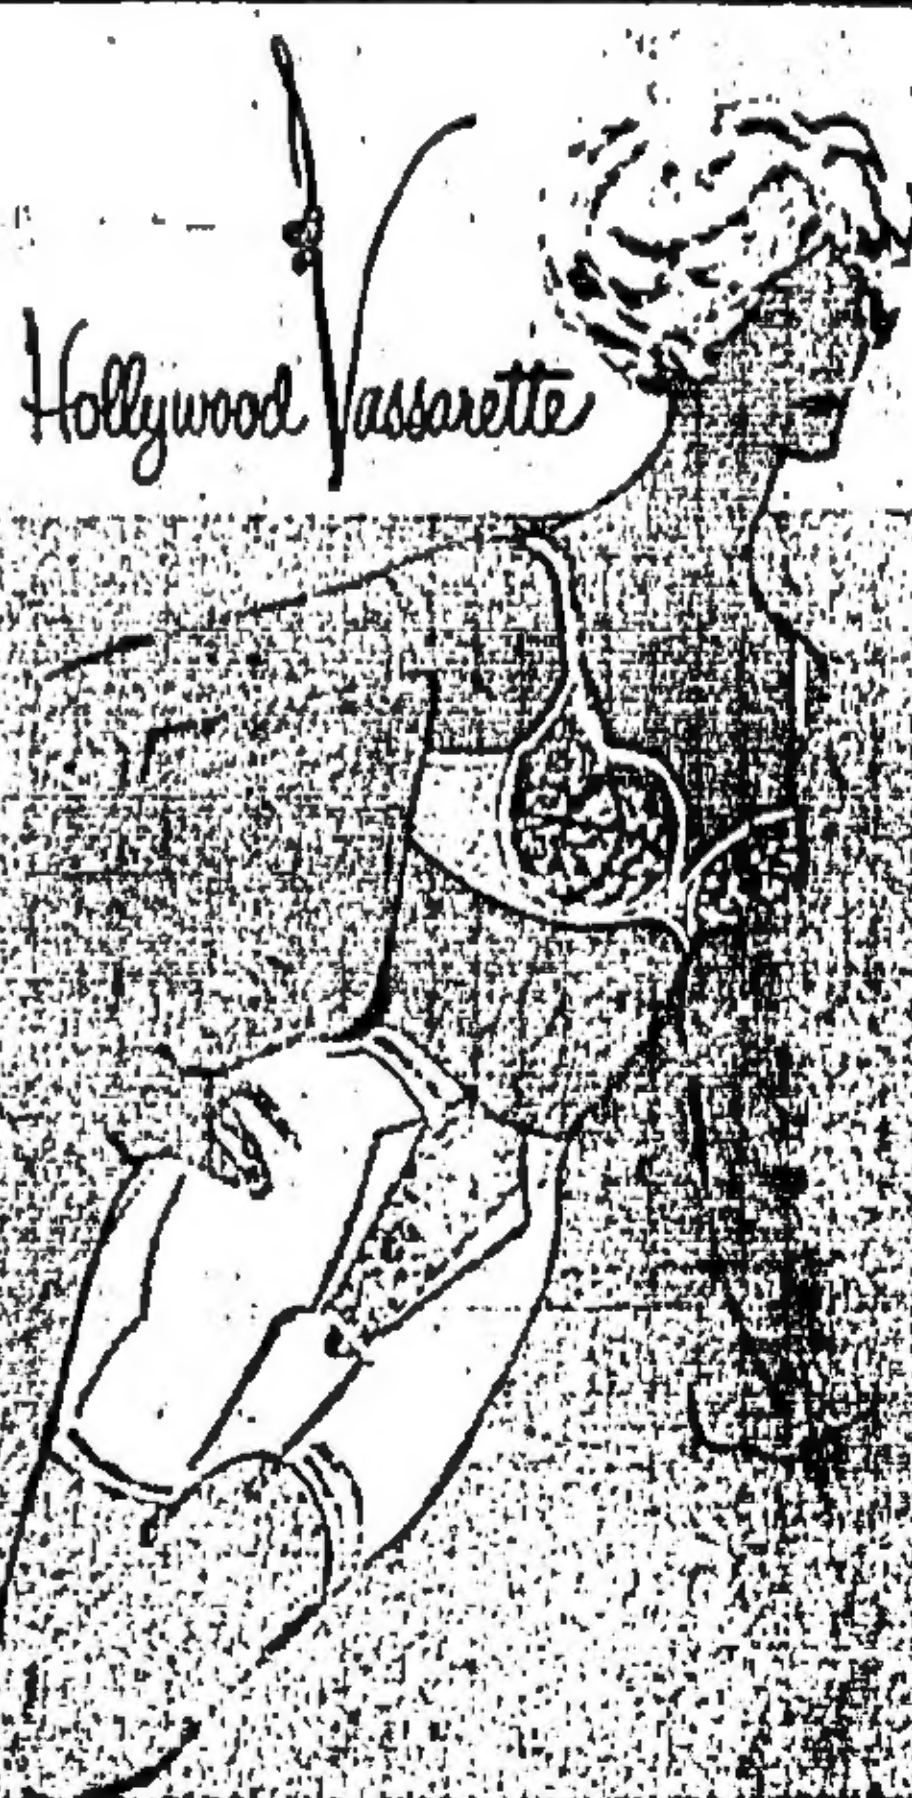

Von Hindenburg, as chief of the German Army during the Great War saved the nation from destruction.

Hitler declared: "If the political leadership of our people in those days had been equal to the leadership of the Army, Germany would have spared the deepest humiliation of her history," he added.

The Prince of Wales risked his life this afternoon in an attempt to save the life of a 12-year-old French boy.

The Prince was sun-bathing on the well-known Biarritz beach of D'Amour when the boy was knocked unconscious by a huge comb. The Prince plunged into the water without hesitation on hearing the boy's mother scream.

The child was actually rescued by a life-guard who was rowing a boat near the scene and was able to lift the boy from the sea while the Prince of Wales was swimming rapidly towards him.
